A note about risk

All investing is subject to risk. Diversification does not ensure a profit or protect against a loss in a declining market. Investments in bond funds are subject to interest rate, credit, and inflation risk. U.S. Government backing of Treasury or agency securities applies only to the underlying securities and does not prevent share-price fluctuations. Because high-yield bonds are considered speculative, investors should be prepared to assume a substantially greater level of credit risk than with other types of bonds. Target Retirement Funds are subject to the risks associated with their underlying funds. LifeStrategy Funds are subject to the risks associated with their underlying funds. Prices of mid- and small-cap stocks often fluctuate more than those of large-company stocks. Foreign investing involves additional risks including currency fluctuations and political uncertainty. Stocks of companies in emerging markets are generally more risky than stocks of companies in developed countries. Funds that concentrate on a relatively narrow market sector face the risk of higher share-price volatility.

The Vanguard Retirement Savings Trust is not a mutual fund. It is a collective trust available only to tax-qualified plans and their eligible participants. The collective trust mandates are managed by Vanguard Fiduciary Trust Company, a subsidiary of The Vanguard Group, Inc.

An investment in a money market fund is not insured or guaranteed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or any other government agency. Although a money market fund seeks to preserve the value of your investment at $1 per share, it is possible to lose money by investing in such a fund.

An investment in a stable value fund is neither insured nor guaranteed by the U.S. government. There is no assurance that the fund will be able to maintain a stable net asset value, and it is possible to lose money by investing in the fund.

*The expense ratio is the cost of running the fund, expressed as a percentage of the fund's assets, as of the most recent fiscal year. For funds with underlying funds, the expense ratio is the average weighted expense ratio of the underlying funds. For any fund in existence for less than one year, the expense ratio is the projected cost of running the fund. This data is as of September 30, 2009.

The yield quotation more closely reflects the current earnings of the money market fund than the total return quotations.

Risk level takes into account the different types of risk applicable to each fund's asset class and investment style.
